

David Roemer <david@dkroemer.com>

Catholic Truth of Scotland

1 message

David Roemer <david@dkroemer.com>

Wed, Nov 15, 2017 at 12:07 PM

To: Leo William Cushley <carmel.smith@staned.org.uk>

Your Eminence,

I'm in a conflict with the editor of the Catholic Truth of Scotland about a theological interpretation of the Apostles' Creed. I've attached the pdf file on the blog where the discussion is taking place. On the last page, the editor wishes me luck in getting you involved in the conflict.

My interpretation is that Jesus will come again at the end of time and judge the living and the dead. We are not guaranteed salvation, but can hope for perfect fulfillment. This perfect fulfillment is based on our human experiences. One of our human experiences is our interaction with other human beings. God gives us bodies precisely so that we can interact with other human beings.

The editor of the Catholic Truth is insisting that the Church teaches that the "human soul" is immortal and survives our death. I consider this bad theology and is the reason so many Christians think the arguments for God's existence based on unanswered scientific questions make sense. I attempt to explain this at

https://www.academia.edu/23340072/WHY_PEOPLE_BELIEVE_GOD_CAUSED_THE_BIG_BANG

The Catholic Church in America, I am sorry to say, is suppressing my attempts to explain the rational argument for God's existence. I've attached the lesson plan I wanted to use. My correspondence about this matter is here:

<http://www.newevangelist.me/>

Columbia University declined my offer to give a lecture/lesson on God's existence in a manner that violated my constitutional rights. I filed a lawsuit that is pending in the courts of the United States (docket no. 17-0818, Second Circuit of the United States Court of Appeals):

<https://avemariaradio.net/audio-archive/church-and-culture-october-21-2017-hour-1/>

Respectfully yours in Christ,

David Roemer

347-414-2285

 ND8lesson.pdf
83K